Award in Internationalization 2007-2008

Cheryl Dueck, Associate Professor, German and Slavic Studies.

A specialist in Eastern German literature, German cinema, 20th c. German literature and culture, post-unification studies, and women's studies, Dr. Dueck has extended opportunities for student learning and academic exchange in Germany and throughout eastern Europe. Through her insight, communication skills, and drive to open cross-cultural learning and collaboration to our students and faculty, she negotiated the University's participation in the national consortium, Canadian Year in Freiburg, where students pursue classes at the Albert-Ludwigs-Universität and are immersed in German language and culture. In addition to her role in coordinating other exchange programs offered through her Department (to Lviv, Ukraine; St. Petersburg, Russia; Trier, Germany) as Department Head and as Coordinator, Central and Eastern European Studies, she has used her energy and position to open another, exciting inter-cultural portal for scholarship with Szeged University (Hungary). One colleague underscored the unique combination of Dr. Dueck's research, teaching and service in an international context by stating "all her research benefits the students . . . Dr. Dueck understands her German and European Studies research always from the role as cultural ambassador, of Canada in Germany, and German and Central European culture in Canada."

Professor of the Year 2007-2008

Lori Wilkinson, Associate Professor, Sociology. An internationally recognized authority on immigration and refugee studies, in particular, of immigrant youths' adaptation to Canadian economic and educational experience, Dr. Wilkinson's past year underscores the leadership in research, teaching, and service that is her hallmark. Her research, now extending to later-generation immigrants and Aboriginal peoples of Canada, was described as "provocative and elegantly written" and has been showcased nationally "as the kind of clear, concise and policy relevant research that other scholars might aspire toward." Principal investigator for this year's inaugural awarding of the SSHRCC/Metropolis grant to extend her work cross-provincially, she also received inaugural funding from the Global Peace and Security Fund and the Canadian International Development Agency to bring the Canadian Ethnic Studies Biennial Conference—Ethnicity, Civil Society, and Public Policy—to Winnipeg. Her colleagues and students note her skill and generosity as a collaborator, mentor and teacher. Described by a colleague as a "warm demander" with "an uncompromising commitment to students mastering . . . the principles and practices of survey methods," Dr. Wilkinson is well known to go to "endless lengths to support student work . . . with good-natured advice and encouragement." Her students mirror this esteem not only in the outstanding evaluations of her teaching, but also in their recognition of her continuing support of both graduate and undergraduate students in attaining their professional goals. Finally, Dr. Wilkinson's extensive service—to her Department, Faculty, University, community, and profession—stands as exemplary on its own, but as extraordinary in the context of her outstanding contributions to scholarship and to her students this year.
